

WHY CHOOSE DHG?

DHG uses a TPRM maturity model that measures key program capabilities balanced with regulatory expectations (e.g., FFIEC, Fed, OCC and CFPB) and leading practices to assist our clients in rapidly assessing their program's strengths and opportunities.

designing, deploying and remediating third-party risk management

An effective TPRM framework helps organizations address risk throughout the third-party life cycle by evaluating, segmenting, measuring, managing and developing third-parties for the benefit and protection of the organization. DHG has gained comprehensive insight into the design, adoption and sustainability of TPRM programs. The foundation for effectively achieving program goals is the segmentation of third-parties, and potential third-parties, so that the appropriate level of effort and due diligence is expended using a risk-based approach.

With increasing integration of third-parties into core processes, the speed of business and growth in regulatory complexity is increasing – forcing financial services organizations to review and improve their approach to working with third-parties and other strategic third-party relationships. A cohesive TPRM process increases the chances of realizing opportunities and anticipating associated threats

WHAT WE DO

We assist our clients in the design, implementation and transformation of sustainable TPRM programs to deliver short-term and long-term outcomes in accordance with regulatory expectations. Our offerings are tailored for each organization to bring a unique value proposition and drive success.

SERVICES TO MEET YOUR NEEDS

DHG's TPRM methodology employs a risk-based approach to managing third-party relationships through the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) Bulletin 2013-29 life cycle phases (planning, due diligence, contracting, ongoing monitoring, termination, governance oversight and accountability, documentation and reporting, and independent reviews).

Our services include:

- Assessing current state, design and implementation of TPRM and key framework elements, along with development of policy and procedures for identified gaps and technology selection and deployment.
- Providing a third-party risk management maturity assessment that measures key dimensions of program capabilities to rapidly assess a program's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities for improvement and threats, along with a prioritized implementation roadmap of improvements scaled by degree of urgency and difficulty.
- Reviewing self-assessment questionnaires and performing onsite IT security assessments at our clients' third-party locations to identify potential risks that could impact our clients' security posture.
