Experience

Tom Tollerton is a manager in DHG's IT Advisory Services Group and has over 12 years of experience in a broad range of cybersecurity services, including risk advisory, technical infrastructure assessments, and compliance audits. Immediately prior to joining Dixon Hughes Goodman, Tom worked for a Fortune 500 federal defense contractor, developing IT risk and compliance solutions. He also has experience working in the retail industry, developing and maintaining compliance programs for a PCI Level 1 merchant. With DHG, Tom has experience performing assessments for numerous clients across a wide array of industries including retail, healthcare, legal, aviation, dealerships, and financial institutions.

In addition to traditional cybersecurity advisory services, Tom is licensed and certified to perform forensic collection and analysis, and has provided litigation support for various civil cases including, domestic dispute, employment law, and intellectual property theft. Tom leads DHG's data breach response forensic investigation services across the Firm's footprint.
